HEARTS OF GOLD

For many people, life has not dealt them the easiest hand – especially the lives of young orphans.

They may have lost parents, faced instability, and experienced a range of emotions.

However, these experiences can also be a source of strength. Having a firsthand understanding of hardship allows them to empathize with others and understand the value of helping those in need. This empathy translates into action, and we see it in two remarkable young ladies called Annie and Winifred.

Two years ago, Annie and Winifred started an adult orphan empowerment program that HEAL sponsored through its partner 'Orphans Concern' in Liberia, West Africa.

The program was initiated to empower orphans over the age of 18, with practical life and vocational skills to support their education.

These collective skills will help them transition into lives of adult independence.

Both young ladies were enrolled at Faith University College, an institution that offers vocational and academic Degrees to study plumbing. They have completed the basic certification, and they are now enrolled in the upper-level stage to get certified in a branch of industrial plumbing called 'Bio Digest.'

When completed, Annie and Winifred have a dream to start a company and serve as role models for other girls.

Orphans Pay It Forward Through Volunteering

Life, growing up at an orphanage can be tough.

Yet, amidst the challenges, two remarkable young ladies are choosing to focus not on what they lack, but on how much they can give.

These girls are turning the tables on their circumstances by volunteering their plumbing services, leaving a trail of hope and positivity in their wake.

"Entering the university was the most exciting moment for us and with us being the first we have to do our best to prove that we and our friends deserve this opportunity," - Winifred.

THE TRAILBLAZERS

"All our lives we have longed for such an opportunity and today we have it. We will utilize it to the best of our ability as we are the role models of the program, and our lives are tied to it" – Annie

Now that Annie and Winifred have learned the skills to make an impact, their first action is to give back to an orphanage. They exemplified their skills by doing all the plumbing work at a newly built restroom for orphans in Bomi County, Liberia. This impact of their actions extends far beyond the immediate recipients of their help. Their enthusiasm and commitment will inspire others to volunteer as well.

These young philanthropists are a testament to the human spirit's resilience. Despite their own challenges, they choose to focus on the well-being of others, leaving a trail of hope and inspiration in their wake.

Their story serves as a powerful reminder that even in difficult circumstances, kindness and compassion can shine brightly.

This is just the beginning of being able to give back!
